

EL LLIBRE DELS PLAERS IMMENSOS (The Book of Immense Pleasures), Melcior Comes

A refined and imaginative young Majorcan nobleman narrates his personal journey of discovery and his attempts to grow up, as he allows himself to be guided by pleasure and a lust for life. Our hero's tragicomic adventures recount the quest to find one's place in the world. Through eroticism, his search for a vocation, his friendships and his travels, the narrator throws a revealing light on the world around him as he, in turn, learns to grapple with the world with exquisite grace. This is a novel full of surprises, subtleties and joys, written with an intensity that makes it impossible to put down.

Publication date: May 2007

Pages: 344

Melcior Comes (Sa Pobla, Majorca, 1980) obtained his degree in Law and Literary Theory from the Universitat de Barcelona. His novels include L'aire i el món, winner of the Premi Ciutat d'Elx in 2003; and L'estupor que us espera (2004), winner of the Premi Documenta in 2005. He is also the co-author of a collection of essays entitled Qui no mereix una pallissa! (2005), and is a regular contributor to the media, writing in the Diari de Balears supplement Presència and singulardigital.cat, amongst others.

